

Contents

Preface	ix
1. Induction	1
2. The authoritative	9
Background note	9
The notion of authority	18
The authoritative in Islam	23
3. A summary transition	86
Competence	86
Determination	89
The authoritarian	92
4. The text and authority	96
The Qur'ān and Sunnah	98
Text, determination, and authority	115
Unreasonable interpretations and the authoritative	132
5. The construction of the authoritarian	141
The iron law of authoritarianism	142
Islamic law as a work in movement	145
The fundamentals of religion and burdens of proof	150
Moral objections and authoritarianism	161

6. The anatomy of authoritarian discourses	170
The demise of the juristic tradition	170
Consistency	177
Selectivity of evidence	180
Balancing of interests and the use of discretion	188
7. Faith-based assumptions and determinations demeaning to women	209
Prostrating to husbands, licking their ulcers while struggling with Ḥadīth methodology	210
Keeping husbands and God happy, and making it to heaven	218
Bargaining with crooked-ribs, defective intellects, bad omens, dogs, and women	222
Praying in closets, hugging the wall, and the dangers of seduction	232
Racism, sexism, and a sense of beauty	247
Conclusion: Resisting the authoritarian while searching for the moral	264
Appendix: Translated legal opinions by C.R.L.O. jurists	272
Glossary of terms	298
Bibliography	310
Index	341