

Contents

List of Acronyms	xxi
Table of Treaties and International Materials	xxiii
Table of Cases	xxxv

PART I: PRELIMINARY QUESTIONS

1. The Need for Corporate Environmental Accountability	3
1.1 The private sector's share of negative environmental impacts	5
1.2 Business opportunities to contribute to the global protection of the environment	7
2. History and Definitions	11
2.1 From Stockholm to Johannesburg	11
2.2 The concept of corporate responsibility	18
2.3 The concept of corporate accountability	19
2.4 From corporate responsibility to corporate accountability	22
3. The Shortcomings of Traditional Legal Solutions	25
3.1 The shortcomings of national control	25
3.1.1 Host State control	25
3.1.2 Home State control	30
3.2 The limits of international law on State responsibility	34
3.3 IEL and the private sector	38
3.3.1 International regimes on civil liability for environmental damage: en impasse ?	39
3.3.2 International environmental crimes?	42
3.3.3 International environmental law: implications, expectations and legal standards of conduct for private companies	44
3.3.4 The role of soft law	47
3.4 Links with other areas of international law	48
3.4.1 Synergies with international human rights law	49
3.4.2 Balancing the international protection of foreign investment	51
3.5 The status of MNCs in international law and the need for a broader approach to the private sector	56
3.6 Preliminary remarks	61

PART II: EMERGING INTERNATIONAL STANDARDS OF CORPORATE ENVIRONMENTAL ACCOUNTABILITY

4. Primary Rules?	65
4.1 A theory of legal standards	66
4.2 The international character of legal standards for corporate environmental accountability	70
4.3 Standards and sources of IEL	72
4.4 The role of international organizations	75
5. The UN and the OECD: Parallel or Convergent Paths?	77
5.1 International regulation of MNCs: the UN draft Code of Conduct on Transnational Corporations	78
5.2 Subsequent practice of the UN in the 1990s: the partnership approach	85
5.2.1 The UN Global Compact	87
5.3 The human rights-based approach	91
5.3.1 The 'Norms on the Responsibilities of Transnational Corporations and Other Business Enterprises with regard to Human Rights'	92
5.3.2 The UN Special Representative on Corporate Responsibility	98
5.4 The parallel story of the OECD Guidelines for MNEs	101
5.5 The convergence of environmental standards	106
5.5.1 Emerging international standards	113
5.6 Concluding remarks	115
6. A Contribution of Human Rights Monitoring Bodies?	119
6.1 Limited results before national courts	121
6.1.1 Earlier cases piercing the corporate veil	121
6.1.2 Applying IEL to MNCs	123
6.1.2.1 Transboundary pollution	125
6.1.2.2 International environmental principles	128
6.1.2.3 Intra-pollution and the right to a healthy environment	130
6.2 Applying human rights law to MNCs for the protection of the environment	133
6.2.1 The contribution of human rights monitoring bodies	134
6.2.1.1 The right to life and health	135
6.2.1.2 Right to property	138
6.2.1.3 Right to culture	140
6.3 Limited results and some potential	141

7. Standard-setting by International Financial Institutions	144
7.1 The International Finance Corporation	145
7.2 The IFC Policy and Performance Standards for Environmental Protection	147
7.2.1 General requirements	150
7.2.1.1 Environmental impact assessment	151
7.2.1.2 Environmental management system	153
7.2.2 Pollution prevention and climate change	156
7.2.3 Biodiversity conservation	158
7.2.3.1 Sustainable use of natural resources	162
7.2.4 Cultural heritage	164
7.3 The IFC contribution to corporate environmental accountability	167
7.3.1 Trend-setting for corporate environmental accountability?	169
7.3.2 Concluding Remarks	170
8. Emerging Standards on Corporate Accountability in IEL	172
8.1 The Convention on Biodiversity and the private sector	173
8.2 Emerging international standards on corporate environmental accountability	178
8.2.1 Integration	178
8.2.1.1 Self-assessment of environmental impacts	179
8.2.1.2 Environmental management systems	181
8.2.2 Prevention/due diligence	182
8.2.3 Precaution	186
8.2.4 Disclosure of environmental information	188
8.2.5 Public consultations	192
8.2.6 Sustainable use of natural resources	194
8.2.6.1 Respect for internationally protected sites	196
8.3 Conclusions	199
PART III: TOOLS FOR COMPLIANCE WITH STANDARDS OF CORPORATE ENVIRONMENTAL ACCOUNTABILITY
9. Tools for Compliance	205
9.1 Secondary rules?	206
9.2 International organizations' tools for compliance	207
10. The Tools of International Financial Institutions: Conditions in Loan Agreements and Complaints Mechanisms	209
10.1 Environmental responsibility of the IFC	209
10.1.1 Lessons learnt from past implementation	212
10.1.2 Ways to enhance the IFC's monitoring role	215

10.2	The contribution of complaint mechanisms	216
10.2.1	Ways to enhance the IFC's complaint mechanism	222
10.3	Concluding remarks	222
11.	Sharpening the Monitoring Role of Other International Organizations	224
11.1	Indirect monitoring	225
11.1.1	Human Rights Monitoring Bodies	225
11.1.2	Monitoring by the World Heritage Committee	228
11.2	Direct monitoring	229
11.2.1	OECD Guidelines implementation	230
11.2.1.1	The unrealized potential	231
11.2.1.2	Ways to enhance the OECD Guidelines implementation	238
11.2.2	The UN Security Council's monitoring through experts groups	240
11.2.2.1	The OECD Guidelines and the UN Security Council	241
11.2.3	Complaints before the UN Global Compact	243
11.3	Conclusions	245
12.	Integrating International Standards in UN-Business Partnerships	247
12.1	The proliferation of UN-business partnerships	247
12.1.1	Partnerships between MEAs and the private sector	251
12.2	Partnerships' persistent limits	254
12.3	Recommendations on UN-business partnerships based on international environmental standards	259
12.3.1	Recommendations for CBD-business partnerships	262
12.4	Conclusions: binding standards for voluntary partnerships	265
13.	Conclusions	266
	Bibliography	276
	Index	295