

CONTENTS

p a g e

Acknowledgements

Foreword

Introduction 1

The Paris Principles 1

Types of national institution 3

The research questions 5

Methodology 6

Structure of this report 6

One:Ghana 9

Structure 11

Complaints procedure 12

Use of enforcement powers 13

Nature of cases 14

Suo Motu investigations 15

Prison visits 16

Cultural practices 16

Corruption 17

Conditions of service 17

Education 18

Work with NGOs 19

Media 19

Conclusion 19

Two:Indonesia 21

Structure 23

Complaints 24

Accessibility outside Java 29

Education 33

International instruments 34

Conclusion 34

Three:Mexico 37

Structure 37

Complaints 39

The CNDH and the army 43

The indigenous population 45

Prisons 47

Disappearances 48

Education 50

The Human Rights Commission of the Federal District 50

The State Human Rights Commission of Jalisco 51

Conclusion 54

Four: Legitimacy	57
Autonomous national institutions	57
Political context	58
National human rights institutions in new democracies	59
National human rights institutions as an answer to critics	62
National human rights institutions in stable democracies	64
Mandate	67
Accountability	70
Complaints driven?	71
Economic, social and cultural rights	74
Members and staff	77
Education and training	79
Five: Accessibility	83
Devolved structures	83
Location	86
Vulnerable groups	87
Six: Links with other institutions	91
Enforcement: links with the judiciary	91
Specialised human rights tribunals	94
Media and public perceptions	95
Links with NGOs	97
International links	99
Seven: Beyond the Paris Principles	105
The Paris Principles revisited?	107
Eight: Recommendations	111
Civil society involvement	111
Legal basis and mandate	111
Economic, social and cultural rights	112
Membership and staffing	112
Complaints investigation and patterns of violations	113
Enforcement	114
Education	114
Accessibility	114
Budget	115
Planning and evaluation	115
International links	115
Relations with other institutions	116
List of those who commented on an earlier draft of this document	117
Appendix – The Paris Principles	121
Further reading	125