

CONTENTS

Acknowledgements and Dedication	i
List of Figures, List of Illustrations and Tables	iv
Preface by Jonathan Walters	vii
Foreword by Philip B. Smith	xi
Project Jonah by Brendon Gooneratne	xv
The Nauru Case and Sustainable Development by Antony Anghie	xvii
Excerpts from the Separate Opinion of Vice President Christopher Weeramantry of the International Court of Justice, The Hague, in the Gabčíkovo-Nagymaros case	xxi
Introduction	1
1. Eppawala - Heart of the Ancient water and soil conservation ecosystems of Rajarata	28
2. Appropriate technology for developing the Eppawala phosphate rock deposit	49
3. The Technology of Development and the Underdevelopment of Technology	74
4. The Conventional Wisdom and the Counter Culture of Alternative Development	106
5. Proposal to mine the Eppawala deposit to exhaustion in 30 years	130
6. Technical, Economic and Political perspectives for and against the proposal	137
7. Ecosystems and Cultural Heritage perspectives against the proposal	153
8. 1998 UNESCO/World Bank meeting on Culture in Sustainable Development	195
9. World Commission on Dams	229
10. The Conventional Wisdom as a Cause of Conflict over water	249
11. Eppawala and Nauru: Comparison and Contrast	273
Conclusion - Americans Share the Anguish of Eppawala	282
POSTSCRIPT	292
ANNEX - Draft World Heritage Convention Application to UNESCO	306
References	323